From the United States Journal. On the death of Gen'l Andrew Jackson.

BY JESSE E. DOW.

Amid a field of glory stood A goodly stalk unscarred and green; Tempest and battle, fire and flood, Had pass'd it as a thing unseen: And still o'er every shattered form It waved its head and mocked the storm.

The Reaper sought that harvest field, The grain was in its yellow leaf, He took the choicest of its yield And bound it in a deathless sheaf; Then soaring to the Garner's dome, The spirit sang the "Harvest Home."

When not a breath swept over the lea, To make the trembling bull-rush nod Oh! 'twas a glorious sight to see That tall ear bending to its God. And when the Reaper marked it well, How in its pride it gently fell. A nation mourns her noblest son,

And bathes in tears his lowly grave; Her moan is heard in every gun Her sigh in every banner's wave! From deep to deep her sorrow spreads While hoary mountains veil their heads. The reaper Death, with noiseless tread,

Has borne her fondest hope away,

Though blooming garlands bound his head

That withering time could ne'er decay; Yet while she weeps, she joys to feel, That on him God hath set his seal. Ye who would rule the people, go! And learn a lesson from the dead, Think how he met his country's foe

In halls of peace, on fields of red.

Defend your soil though tyrants draw,

And make his dying words your law. Oh! he would never falsely clasp The hand that dealt the traitor's blow; Nor would he hug the poisonous asp That sought to sting him in his woe. He loved the faithful and the brave;

He scorned the coward and the knave. Deep in our hearts his fame shall keep Her altar and her quenchless fire, And there shall the proud spirit weep When patriot arms grow weak and tire; And from his memory hope shall bring The roses of the Spirit's SPRING.

A REAL TRANSACTION. A few days since, a young gentleman and lady of Madison, Va., concluded negotiations, which had been going on some time previously, on the subject of annexation, and the articles of union were duly signed and sealed by the parties, and submitted to the mother, a pocket in the shape of a license, and what very respectable widow lady, for ratification. God hath joined together; let no man put avery respectable widow lady, for ratification, peremptorily refused her consent, and declared that the annexation should, under no contingency, take place. The parties got together afterwards, and after deliberating maturely on the subject, concluded that, as the mother would not acknowledge the independence of the young lady, and that as she was neither de jure nor de facto sovereign and independent, the only way to accomplish their object and consummate their wishes, was to revolutionize, and if possible, accomplish their wishes in that way.

Accordingly they procured a suitable coneyance, and set off with all speed to the city of Washington. Arriving at the village of Centreville, accompanied by a female friend, they stopped at an inn to refresh themselves, tack on her lover, which soon put the whole village in an uproar, and brought many of the within the periods we refer to. citizens to the scene of action. ready, and the rebellious subjects are again on their way to the city; and as it as not on their way to the city; and as it as not more than twenty-five or thirty miles, at he was in favor of the measure, he concluded to come along with them, bringing also another young friend, who volunteered his services on the occasion.

The brother, after having been detained a considerable length of time by the magistrate. and no prosecutor appearing, was of course set at liberty. On his return to the inn, and inquiring for the rebels, he was informed that they had been gone more than an hour, but which course no person knew. Filled with rage, and overwhelmed with vexation, he gave up the pursuit.

The rebel party struck up a lively pace, and arrived in the city on Saturday evening, and stopped, of course, at the Virginia House on C. street. The lover and one of his Centreville friends went immediately to the Clerk's ville friends went immediately to the Clerk's office and procured a license, whilst the other went in search of a parent. Just as every thing was ready, and the readen had announced that the pareon was walking at the church to perform his duty, up drives another brother, who had taken the route by Richmond, in pursuit of the rebel fugitives, and pointed if this was the Virginia House? The brother in the negative, and pointed him to the Exchange as the Virginia House. The brother in great haste. Virginia House. The brother in great haste, drove up to the Exchange, and finding he had been deceived, came back, and demanded of the landlord, if there was not a runaway couple in the House. "Not now," says the landlord, "they have just left through the back door, and I will venture any sum they are gone to the Church. They went in a devil of a hurry." "What Church ? what Church ?" exclaimed the brother. "Why to the Baptist in E. street, I suppose, for it was the sexton of that Church I saw here a while ago." Away went the brother to the Church, but when he got there the door was fast. The young lady had told the sexton to lock the door as they went. The brother leaped over the pailing, but unfortunately got into the wrong vard. Meanwhile the parson in a sweet mellow tone, had gone through the ceremony-annexation was consummated—Hymen approved and ratified the articles of union, and ordered his clerk to record it in the book of fate, and the parties left with smiling faces, & hearts throbbing with the liveliest emotions, and returned to the Virginia House. Just as the parties turned the corner, the brother found his way out of the yard, and came into the Church much excited. "Has there been a couple just married here?" he inquired. "There has," answered the young parson. "By whom," he again demanparson very kindly, "to a much higher power. and for the legal authority, I have that in my

sunder." The brother at once saw that he was at the end of his row, and after saying he had travelled two hundred miles in twenty-four hours, forty of which had been on horseback, and was only five minutes too late, he believed he would go back home. On enquiring of the gentleman from Centreville, I was informed that the ladies in that part of the Old Domin-

Jones's message to Congress. Here follows the message of President Jones, to the Texan Congress, which we would lay before our readers, did our limits permit. The burden of this document may be given in a few words. The Presand then proceeds to tell that body, that he lays before them, to use the language of his third and last proclamation, the two alternatives of "peace with the whole world, and independence," or "annexation and its contingencies." These alternatives, our readers know, were on the one hand the acknowledgment of the independence of Texas by Mexico, upon the condition that she would not annex herself to this country, and on the other, the acceptance of the propositions of this country, contained in the joint resolutions of our Congress. This is the sum and substance of the message. Here follow the joint resolutions of the Texan Congress:

HE undersigned has obtained Letters Patent, to enable common Mill stones (or rocks) now OWING to the continued indisposi- in use, to grind CORN, COB and SHUCK, into meal, for Horses, Mules, Cattle, Hogs, &c., theretion of my family, I will rent the house by saving more than one third of a crop, which is an important item with planters. The machinery used for the above purpose is simple and durable, and cannot, with fair means, get out of order. It will last as long as the Stones last, with an expense of 50 cents every five years. To enable the common Mill Stones to grind ear corn into meal, requires no new buildings or extra power. It can also be applied to Horse Mills, Threshing Machines, Gins, or any given power known. The same Mill will grind one-third more of Corn Meal by the introduction of this Machinery, and can be changed from grinding Corn and Cob, to grinding Corn Meal in the space of thirty seconds. Corn alone, when fed to stock, is said to be by the most practical and scientific Planters, constipating in its effects, producing founders, cholics and various other maladies which are incidnt to stock.
